Content

The ETPP Committee continues the work of the Forum ETPP exploring the interface between the private supervisory relationship within its institutional context.

The ETPP project aims to combine the presentation of supervisory material with the following question: How does the institution further or hinder the candidate's becoming a psychoanalyst? Using presentations from colleagues from different Institutions and Societies we explore different impacts on the supervisory process

A training and supervising analyst will present supervisory material in a small group of colleagues. The participants will reflect on and discuss the clinical material to understand the presenters reasoning about the candidate's capacity, or lack thereof, to function as an analyst. Participants are invited to consider the institutional influences that appear, overtly or covertly, and to make them more explicit.

We will have two groups working for two days in the pre-congress with one presentation in each group. One group with a presenter from an Eitingon - model, and one from the French with a moderator and reporter in each group. It is only possible to participate if you are a training/supervising psychoanalyst from the IPA. Participation during both days is obligatory.
